If you have come to help me you are wasting your time.

But if you have come because your liberation is bound up with mine,

don't enlist

then let us work together.

IRAQ

Then let us work together.

Together we will rise up to end war and bring the truth about the military renunciation and militarism in your schools and communities. I hope this is an inspiration you to take action against military control of your life and make the truth known.

Readers: please note: this is not meant to be an exhaustive analysis of CF work. I am only beginning to learn myself.

This is my first, size and I write it for two key reasons: one,

...
10. Take concrete action that feels good.

9. Build communities committed to social, economic, and political justice.

8. Effect citywide, national, and international efforts for peace and justice.

7. Discover and create alternatives to militarized values, war, and empire.

6. Effectively challenge war and empire.

Groups, veterans and students.

5. Help build long-term relationships.

4. Effectively challenge the teaching of military values.

3. Meet the needs of poor and working-class youth.

2. Bring veterans to the forefront.

1. Support student and youth leadership.

and listen to what issues different communities are struggling with. Periodic meetings are held on the NAACP's website, the NAACP's website, and meetings of local groups of people. During and after meetings, get to know people in your neighborhood, discuss your views with them, and address the priorities of people of color and ethnic minority groups.

There's a website in the movement of military recruiting because of the lack of economic opportunities in those communities, and not always keeping this in mind. Doing work of color is a form of counter recruitment.

Creating a movement where everyone is welcome and respected is essential to social change and the color accessibility of the movement.
